▶ Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff shakes hands with NDP Leader Jack Layton at a Khalsa Day celebration yesterday in Toronto.

Crowds celebrate Sikhism's beginnings

Toronto was ablaze with bright blues and oranges yesterday as thousands of festively attired Sikhs celebrated the birth of their religion and its values of peace, harmony and kindness. Toronto's annual Khalsa Day parade celebrates the birth of Sikhism in 1699, and Sikhs from as far away as Montreal and Windsor travelled to join friends and family in the GTA.

Leaders zeroing in on GTA

Harper has made more appearances in Liberal 905 ridings than in all of Prairies

Election 2011

What, if anything, do leaders' tours actually mean?

"A leader's tour is a great barometer for how a campaign thinks it's doing," says Conservative strategist Tim Powers.

If that's the case, Stephen Harper and Michael Ignatieff have been playing a game of back-and-forth in the 905.

Harper has made nine appearances in the GTA, four of which were in the Brampton area where the Conservatives also chose to launch their campaign platform.

Most of Harper's appearances have been in key Liberal ridings, although he has attended rallies for local Conservative incumbents Julian Fantino, Peter Kent and Paul Calandra — all of whom hold seats in former Liberal strongholds.

"Generally, the leaders' tours are about playing offence if you're in the lead or defence if you're behind."
TIM POWERS, CONSERVATIVE STRATEGIST

For his part, Ignatieff has made 10 campaign stops in the GTA, three in Liberal territories, four in Conservative-held ridings and three in the NDP's Trinity-Spadina.

The Liberals have vowed to "keep Brampton red," but thus far Ignatieff has made only one appearance in the city, although Bob Rae and Justin Trudeau have both been dispatched to the area.

Suspect in webcam slaying to plead not guilty

Brian Dickson will plead not guilty in the murder of a 23-year-old York University student who was attacked in her basement as her boyfriend watched by webcam in China.

Dickson, 29, is charged with the first-degree murder of Qian Liu, whose body was found partially naked April 15. There were no obvious signs of sexual assault or trauma, police say. It may take another week before the results of a toxicology report are known.

On Friday, Dickson's lawyer, Steven Krys, said his client will plead not guilty to the charge and he expects to put together a "very strong defence" for the once-aspiring actor and student politician.

"We're going to put up the strongest defence we can for this," Krys said Friday night, adding it was his job to defend his client "no matter what the Crown throws at us."

When asked about the state of his client, Krys could give few details.

"He's doing the best he can," Krys said.

Riding vandals strike again

At least two-dozen cases of vandalism have been reported downtown

Election 2011

Slashed car tires, graffiti, ripped campaign signs.

Vandalism, first reported in the ridings of St. Paul's and Trinity-Spadina, has now spread to Davenport and Toronto Centre where, among others, Liberal heavyweight Bob Rae and Eric Hoskins, Liberal MPP for St. Paul's, woke up Saturday to see their car tires hacked.

"This isn't vandalism as much as voter intimidation," Hoskins said yesterday.

He lives in the north part of the Annex in St. Paul's riding, and five homes, including his, were targeted and all car tires slashed. All of the houses had Liberal signs on the front lawns, he said.

Rae tweeted late Saturday the front left tire of his car was slashed.

He said one Liberal supporter in his riding declined to have a Liberal lawn sign. "No thanks, I don't want to get my tires slashed," Rae quoted the man as saying.

Damages

- Police at 53 Division are investigating at least 19 cases of cars with slashed tires and scratched paint in the Soudan Avenue-Hoyle Avenue area.
- Officers at 14 Division are investigating a half-dozen similar cases of destruction of cars in Trinity-Spadina, near Bloor and Bathurst streets. Eight bicycles also had their tires punctured.

Local stranded in U.S. hospital

Vaughan resident David Bye, 55, has been stuck at Methodist University Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., for more than a week because his insurance company can't find an available bed in the GTA, his wife, Anna, says. He suffered two life-threatening seizures while on vacation 1,600 kilometres from home.

"The whole thing has been a very frightening experience because we don't have anybody here. I'm by myself. It was touch-and-go for the first week after he had these seizures," Anna Bye told the Toronto Star over the phone from her hotel room. "I don't know who to call next or what to do next."

News in brief

Construction puts squeeze on traffic

WATER MAIN. The restrictions north on Avenue Road in one of three lanes approaching Dupont Street are because of construction to replace a 100-year-old water main between Dupont and Lawrence.

Drivers have been bottle-necked to a slow drip to ensure water will flow freely from our taps.

The two-year, $60-million project is one of Toronto Water's largest. Crews are laying 5.4 kilometres of pipe under the roadway, some as deep as 15 metres.

Construction is scheduled to be complete by late 2012.

Black Bull pub reopens after blaze

Company wants to open mega-quarry

Rally held at Queen's Park protesting quarry Protesters began five-day walk 100 kilometres north to the quarry site

An American-backed company that assembled farmland north of Orangeville to grow potatoes has applied to develop one of Canada's biggest rock quarries.

But neighbouring farmers are warning of environmental and community consequences if it's allowed to proceed.

The Highland Companies proposes to dig what it calls a mega-quarry from a top-quality limestone deposit just north of Shelburne in Melancthon Township.

150M

A mega-quarry is defined as having a rock reserve of at least 150 million tonnes. The Highland reserve has one billion tonnes, part of a six-billion-tonne deposit.

The quarry lands are to stretch five kilometres across and plunge 200 feet deep.

Opponents of the quarry raise water management as another one of their top concerns.

As the water table in Melancthon Township is high, Highland would have to pump 600 million litres of water a day from the quarry, equivalent to the volume used by 2.7 million Ontarians.

BRAMPTON

Police identify victim

Police have identified the teenager killed during a fight in Brampton Saturday.

They say 15-year-old Klayton Winter was stabbed to death when an altercation broke out at Bramalea City Centre.

Police have spoken to some witnesses, but they are urging anyone else with information on the incident to come forward. No suspect descriptions have been released.

It was Peel Region's sixth homicide of the year.

Police were called at about 5:10 p.m. to the mall's parking lot, Const. George Tudos said from the scene, near Dixie Road. and Queen Street East.

The altercation between the two groups spilled out into the parking lot near the Bay entrance. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Residents return home after fire

Residents of an apartment building in Parkdale were being allowed to move back in on the weekend after a fire forced them out of their homes.

Police say any safety issues linked to the three-alarm blaze have been resolved.

Flames broke out in an electrical room on the eighth floor of the 18-storey building Friday.

Hunting for Easter votes

- Candidates head into final frenetic week of campaign
- Party leaders set their sights on surging Layton

Election 2011

A resurgent Jack Layton started the day with a church service in Toronto, buoyed by some polls suggesting the party is closing in on the second-place Liberals.

The NDP leader and his wife, Olivia Chow, joined the party's candidate — and former MP — Peggy Nash in the riding of Parkdale-High Park for a service at Runnymede United Church. At the end of the service, he joined members at the front of the church to sing the Hallelujah chorus.

Ignatieff and other party leaders have set their sights on Layton recently, unleashing new attack ads and criticizing his platform.

The spike in the polls for the NDP is a dramatic change from earlier in the campaign, when it looked like Layton might struggle to hold on to his existing seats and he was hardly mentioned by other parties or the media.

The Liberals are pointing out a series of supposed exaggerations in the NDP platform, saying the promises are based on invented revenues.

Ignatieff reached out to voters with a 30-minute television broadcast as many families gathered for Easter celebrations.

The infomercial included footage of Ignatieff along the campaign trail, taking questions at town halls and speaking directly to the camera from his bus seat, saying he's not a "career politician" like Layton or Stephen Harper.

Stephen Harper spent the day in British Columbia with a pair of campaign events in Victoria and Vancouver. The prime minister reannounced a children's arts tax credit at a suburban home on a Victoria cul-de-sac. Harper and his wife, Laureen, helped paint and decorate eggs with about a dozen youngsters.

Sign vandals

Stephen Harper was asked about vandalism against Liberal signs and property owners.

- "I'll just tell you we suffer acts of vandalism and these sorts of things as well. None of them are acceptable."
- Party officials later circulated a list of media reports of acts of vandalism against Conservative signs.

Tweeting early election results may lead to fine

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

▶ Michael Geist

Posting election results on social media sites before polls close May 2 could land you a $25,000 fine, Elections Canada says.

Section 329 of the Canada Elections Act prohibits transmission of results before all polling stations have closed.

"It's important for us just to remind people that this is still on the books because there are possible ramifications to it," said Elections Canada spokesperson John Enright.

Still, Elections Canada's friendly reminder isn't sitting well with some Canadians.

University of Ottawa law Prof. Michael Geist offered his expertise this month in an affidavit for a superior court case challenging the constitutionality of the provision.

He wrote that such a ban in 2011 is "simply not possible without inflicting enormous harm to freedom of expression and public confidence in the election system."

"It's not up to Elections Canada to amend this, we're only the administrator. The law is written by Parliament."
JOHN ENRIGHT, ELECTIONS CANADA SPOKESPERSON

Elections Canada says enforcement of the rule will be complaint-driven, and the agency will not monitor sites such as Twitter.

JOE LOFARO

On Twitter

Ottawa blogger Peter Raaymakers kick-started a discussion on Twitter, and since then Internet users worldwide have been weighing in on the ban.

- On Thursday he tweeted, "@mrbarnabyjones You really think people in the West are influenced by how people in the East are voting?"
- Karren Brown from Alberta tweeted, "Think the law has be to (sic) reviewed & updated, but will respect Elxns Cda rules. Not a Conservative."

Endorsement causes Tory campaign controversy

Stephen Harper's campaign was side-swiped Saturday by a controversy over an endorsement given to a Conservative candidate in B.C. by Ripudaman Singh Malik, who was acquitted of criminal charges in the 1985 Air-India bombings.

The party says it would never knowingly have accepted an endorsement from Malik.

Service stifled in Beijing

The Shouwang church's pastors and leaders were placed under house arrest 30 members were detained before Easter gathering began

Chinese police detained at least 30 Christians belonging to an unregistered Beijing church as the congregation gathered for an Easter service yesterday, a church member said.

Police stopped the worshippers from the unregistered Shouwang church as they gathered near a public plaza in the university district, then bused them to a local police station. The Associated Press saw about a dozen people being taken away, but a church member said at least 30 were detained.

Shouwang members have been trying to meet at the plaza in Beijing's Haidian district every Sunday since the congregation was evicted from its rented place of worship three weeks ago, but they have been detained or put under house arrest each time.

Lu Jia, a Shouwang member who was under house arrest overnight until yesterday afternoon, said by telephone that he and his wife held a half-hour service at home using a sermon their pastor uploaded to the Internet.

"Beforehand, I went out and told the men guarding my door that I didn't want to argue with them but I had to tell them that what they were doing was illegal, that it violated my right to believe, to practise my faith," Lu said. "Then we had a short service, reading the sermon together and selections from the Bible." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Constitution

While China's constitution guarantees freedom of religion, Christians are required to worship in churches run by state-controlled organizations.

However, more than 60 million Christians are believed to worship in unregistered "house" churches, compared to about 20 million in the state churches, activists say.

Hundreds die in post-election riots

At least 500 people died in religious rioting that followed Nigeria's presidential election, a civil-rights group said yesterday, as volatile state gubernatorial elections loom this week.

Meanwhile, police in the northern state of Bauchi said at least 11 recent college graduates who helped run polling stations as part of the country's national youth service corps have been killed in post-election violence, while other female poll workers have been raped.

The Civil Rights Congress of Nigeria said the worst hit area was Zonkwa, a town in rural Kaduna state, where more than 300 people died in rioting.

The Civil Rights Congress, led by a Muslim activist, said killings also took place in the towns of Kafanchan and Zangon Kataf, as well as the state capital of Kaduna.

The violence also took a toll on Nigeria's National Youth Service Corps. Authorities are trying to assure members it will be safe for them to take part in tomorrow's gubernatorial elections being held in 29 states, although some have already fled their posts.

Tornado spares lives

The St. Louis area's most powerful tornado in 44 years ripped through an airport and a densely populated suburban area, destroying up to 100 homes, shattering glass at the main terminal and blowing a shuttle bus on top of a roof. Early warnings and good timing helped prevent a tragedy Friday night. But on Easter Sunday, many of those cleaning up the mess also thanked a higher power. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tensions rise in Thai-Cambodia border fights

Thailand denies using chemical weapons against Cambodian troops Military means not a solution: UN

Thai and Cambodian troops exchanged artillery fire yesterday in a third day of fighting that has killed 10 soldiers and uprooted thousands of villagers.

Officials from both sides said the clashes over disputed territory lasted about two hours yesterday morning. Cambodian military officials said the shooting resumed in the afternoon for several hours.

UN chief Ban Ki-moon called for a ceasefire, but the prospects for peace appeared shaky, with the two sides disagreeing on what triggered the fighting and differing on how to negotiate the territorial dispute.

Thailand reported no new casualties, after four of its soldiers were killed and 17 wounded over the previous two days. Witnesses saw one Cambodian soldier and a Cambodian television journalist wounded yesterday. Colleagues said the journalist suffered a head wound but did not appear seriously hurt. Cambodia earlier reported the deaths of six soldiers. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Crown prince declines royal wedding invite

Bahrain's crown prince declined an invitation yesterday to attend Prince William and Kate Middleton's wedding, saying he did not want the Gulf nation's unrest to tarnish the celebration.

Prince Salman bin Hamad Al Khalifa sent his regrets to Prince Charles after questions emerged over the British monarchy's decision to invite a member of Bahrain's Sunni ruling family, which has waged a wide-ranging crackdown against Shiite protesters calling for more freedoms.

Bahrain's rulers have imposed martial law and are backed by a Saudi-led military force to try to quell the uprising. At least 30 people have died in Bahrain since mid-February, including four who died while in official custody, and many well-known activists and lawyers have been imprisoned.

The news helped to avoid a potentially awkward situation during Friday's wedding. Campaigners in Britain complained when palace officials said Saturday that the prince was attending the nuptials, and some petitioned Foreign Secretary William Hague to revoke the invitation.

Prince Salman said he was "saddened and troubled" by British reports about his attendance.

"While these (media reports) have certainly highlighted a number of significant issues currently facing the kingdom of Bahrain, they have fundamentally misrepresented my own views, outlook and position on recent events and thus, clearly sought to involve my potential attendance as a political proxy for wider matters involving Bahrain."

A Buckingham Palace spokesman confirmed the prince's decision. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BP too slow on uptake: Scientists

Scientists say it is taking far too long to dole out millions of dollars in BP funds for badly needed Gulf oil spill research, and it could be too late to assess the crude's impact on pelicans, shrimp and other species by the time studies begin.

No money has been made available for this year, and it could take months to determine which projects will be funded. "It's like a murder scene," said Dana Wetzel, an ecotoxicologist at the Mote Marine Laboratory in Florida. "You have to pick up the evidence now."

Insurance for tweets?

- Unruly Facebook posts or offensive tweets could land you in court
- But insurance for liability risks of social media is around the corner

As an increasing number of tweets and Facebook postings speed onto the information superhighway, some will inevitably crash and burn.

But unlike drivers caught in a car wreck, users behind careless tweets or nasty Facebook postings haven't traditionally had any kind of insurance to bail them out.

They soon might. Malcolm Randles, who issues cyber insurance policies for Kiln, a subsidiary of Lloyd's of London, said brokers in Canada are keeping a keen eye on social media trends and are beginning to develop coverage for the consequences of unruly posts.

"We're sort of feeling our way through, trying to work (it) out. It's very new in Canada. Brokers have caught on to what their colleagues are doing in the U.S."

MALCOLM RANDLES, SUBSIDIARY OF LLOYD'S OF LONDON

As employers increasingly use sites such as Facebook and Twitter to market products, communicate with customers and collect information, they leave themselves open to regulatory, legal and reputational risks. And where there's risk, there's the insurance sector.

With the use of social media in the corporate world comes the potential for lawsuits regarding privacy issues, intellectual property infringement and defamation.

The liability risk stems from the fact that many companies don't appear to be establishing clear, written policies for social networking, said Eric Dolden, a Vancouver-based insurance lawyer with Dolden Wallace Folick LLP.

Dolden said for now, the demand for social media insurance coverage is mostly for corporations.

Dolden said large companies could pay about $100,000 for a $10-million policy that protects against data loss and liability, though small companies would pay much less.

Dolden said it's only a matter of time before firms offer personal insurance lines for those using social media, much like automobile insurance for drivers.

Global automakers unveil local China brands in Shanghai

Chinese models seen as tool to wrest technology from foreigners But automakers won't admit it's happening

Some of the new Chinese cars unveiled at last week's Shanghai Auto Show are affordable for millions of buyers — a happy development for Beijing that might prove costly for the global automakers producing them.

General Motors Co. unveiled the 630 sedan, the first model from its new Baojun badge developed with Chinese joint venture partners. The four-door is based on an older GM car and will have a sticker price of 70,000 to 100,000 yuan ($10,200 US to $14,600 US).

Honda Motor Co. displayed the plain, compact four-door S1 at the auto show, the first from its new Everus line, which went on sale this week. Nissan Motor Co. showed off an unnamed car it plans to sell under the Venucia brand next year.

These so-called "indigenous" brands will only be sold in China and their prices are aimed at a segment of the market that is already crowded with cars from lesser known Chinese brands. They will also be in competition with the foreign automakers' existing entry-level models.

Then and now

- When global automakers first entered China a quarter century ago, they were required to operate in joint ventures that were aimed at helping local partners learn and grow.
- Foreign automakers were allowed to keep hold of their technology and other intellectual property in those original agreements.
- Both parties were happy to split fat profits, but the results have disappointed China's communist leaders because international brands such as Honda, Buick and Volkswagen now dominate with 70 per cent of the market.

Car makers say they are introducing the nameplates with their Chinese joint venture partners so they can tap growth from China's expanding middle class.

But industry watchers say it's a new tactic by China's government, which is unhappy with the failure of state-owned automakers to gain significant market share for Chinese brands since partnering with foreigners.

Manufacturing Chinese models is the "new cost of market access" for global automakers, said Mike Dunne, whose consultancy, Dunne & Co., specializes in Asia's auto markets.

"Beijing's not happy," so authorities drew up a new set of rules that would require automakers to share their technology if they want to expand in China, said Dunne.

SOLE SEARCHING FOR VINTAGE TREASURES

URBAN COMPASS

ANDREW WALLACE
METRO TORONTO

You might call Erin Anderson a shoe hunter of sorts. She has chased the finest second-hand leather goods around the world and back again, making stops in London and Dubai, while frequenting warehouses across the eastern United States.

She cut her teeth with a U.K.-based vintage giant, but now she's on her own, the sole proprietor of Stacked Vintage, a small shop in Bloorcourt Village that retails — and wholesales — all types of quality leather.

"It's a random, weird and elusive business," she says. "I have to sort through piles and piles of leather at these warehouses where second-hand goods are processed. I usually spend two or three days at each location and I'll probably filter through roughly 10,000 pounds of shoes. If I'm lucky, I'll pull 200 or 300 pounds out of that."

Anderson is nothing if not picky when it comes to her product. Her shoes, she says, always have something special about them. She doesn't like to share the tricks of her trade — in the shoe-hunting business, secrets are closely guarded — but she will tell me this: A truly unique piece of leather is invariably a prized find.

"Anderson is nothing if not picky when it comes to her product. Her shoes, she says, always have something special about them."

"I look for things I've never seen before," she explains. "I want the product to have a particular quality that's particularly lovely. Labels are also important and so, too, is craftsmanship. If they're made in Italy or Spain, even better. These are all things I keep an eye out for."

Her all-time favourite score?

Handcrafted, turn-of-the-century Victorian lace-up boots.

"They're just so incredible, I've actually kept them as a kind of artifact," Anderson gushes. "I was blown away by how they were made and how tiny they were. I couldn't imagine anybody I know fitting into that pair of shoes. They were so narrow, probably only two to three inches wide."

She found them, like so many others, on one of her rummaging runs, digging through another obese pile of discarded leather in an undisclosed spot somewhere south of the border. Though her eye found them first, it was her hands that told her their quality.

"I like the tactile sensation of things," she says. "It helps me pick things out because I can stick my hands in the pile and feel out the leather. This pair was so structured compared to most regular boots. It wasn't soft at all. Then, once I pulled them out and looked closely at them, I could see that every stitch was done by hand. It was really quite amazing."

#elxn41: Be Heard

Metro invited Federation of Canadian Municipalities CEO Brock Carlton and columnist Ivor Tossell to discuss urban issues and what's missing from the federal election campaign. The following are excerpts from the online chat.

METRO: Why should a federal campaign address urban issues?

BROCK: The federal government has a large role to play in our cities and communities. Their policies and programs have a direct impact on cities and towns. The feds cannot deliver to Canadians without working with cities. Our country is too big and complex to work in silos. And we need national leadership from the feds on key issues that affect our economy, the environment and social issues.

IVOR: Well, you could ask, what does the federal government have to do with health care, which is also a provincial matter? The fact is that cities are a central part of Canadian life, just like health care. A national vision for what it means to live in a Canadian city is important — it's quality of life.

Mystery person hops to it to help woman and pet

An anonymous donor has purchased a $50,000 insurance policy to help an Oklahoma woman keep her pet kangaroo as a therapy pet.

The Broken Arrow city council is considering an exotic animal ordinance exemption that would allow Christie Carr to keep Irwin, the partially paralyzed red kangaroo, within city limits.

Council could vote May 3 on a proposal that would allow exotic animal owners to keep their pets if they obtain a newly created permit. The permit would require them to have a liability insurance policy for any injuries inflicted by the animal, certification showing the animal has adequate housing for its health, and meet all U.S. federal and state guidelines for licensing, among other provisions.

Carr said she couldn't have afforded to purchase such a policy and even contemplated moving out of Broken Arrow to continue caring for the animal. Coun. Richard Carter said the ordinance exemption is designed to allow Christie to keep Irwin within city limits while safeguarding residents from potential harm the animal might cause. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAVE YOU SEEN ADS LIKE THIS?

"MONEY PROBLEMS?"

"CREDIT PROBLEMS? Pay NO interest"

"Reduce your debt by up to 80%"

Do they sound too good to be true? That's because they are only telling you HALF OF THE STORY! The procedure you are being sold is called a consumer proposal and may ONLY be administered by a licenced trustee in bankruptcy. After you pay these "consultants" a fee – hundreds, sometimes thousands of dollars – they refer you to a trustee to actually do the work (their ads don't tell you that).

Before you sign any forms, before you pay any fees, "google" consumer proposals and see for yourself…

In order for a consumer proposal to be accepted you need to offer your creditors:

1) More money than they would get if you filed for bankrutpcy; and
2) Enough money to make it "worth your creditors time" – currently that is around 1/3 of what you owe

There's no mystery, there's no clever deals or negotiation going on. These guys never actually speak to your creditors. So why are you paying them a fee?

The choice is yours – if after you speak to a trustee, you still think there's a reason to use one of these "consulting" firms then go ahead – to date, we've never heard of anyone going back once they hear the whole story…

Still not convinced? Their first meeting is free – before you go back a second time and start paying their fees give us a call. We'll walk you through all of your options and then you can decide what's best for you and your family.

One more thing – there are NO upfront fees to file a consumer proposal – if someone wants you to pay a fee BEFORE they file your paperwork then you aren't dealing with the right people!

Kitsch Kitsch, Bang Bang

Friday Night Lights star gets so into character for role as South African war photographer in The Bang Bang Club, he needed counseling to get back out

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Taking on the role of photojournalist Kevin Carter in The Bang Bang Club was hardly a vacation for Taylor Kitsch.

"I didn't sleep. It was a zoo to shoot," he says of the film, which tells the true story of a group of photographers covering the violent last days of apartheid in South Africa. "It wasn't a fun shoot for me at all. I had a lot of kidney problems playing Kev, through the diet and losing 30-something pounds."

Known to audiences for his work on Friday Night Lights, and starring alongside Hugh Jackman in Wolverine, Kitsch threw himself into playing Carter, starting before heading to Johannesburg for filming.

"I had two months to prep on my own in Austin, so that entailed shadowing a photographer, getting a Leica, which is about a 60-year-old film camera that Kev used, developing myself with that, shooting about five to 10 rolls a day and then losing the 30-something pounds just running every day in Austin," he explains. "There's so much pressure I personally put on myself to do this guy justice, so I prepped and prepped so much. It brings your game up more. I would've done anything to get where I needed to be, to feel I could let the scene go. I was a wreck. It's an incredible amount of energy."

But any amount of effort was more than worth it, Kitsch insists, given how badly he wanted to do the film. "Even reading the script and fighting for the role, it was a matter of, like, I know I can play this guy truthfully," he says. "There's something that I know I could hit with him."

But while he worked relentlessly on getting into character, Kitsch wasn't necessarily prepared for how difficult it would be to get out of character, given the intense scenes Carter lived through. (Carter won a Pulitzer Prize for a photo of a young Sudanese girl resting being stalked by a vulture.)

"Some counseling was needed, and just separating yourself and being incredibly conscious of it and being OK that it's taking time to let go was a big thing for me.

"Playing other characters, I can let go and I can laugh a lot. It's not as heavy, obviously. But you take it home with you."

Luckily he won't be taking as much home with him again soon, as his next projects are more on the fun side. Of course, even his upcoming Battleship — based on the board game — isn't without its gravitas.

"Just because it's this big film doesn't mean we can't have a very, very intense moment here or there, or have loss," he says.

Speaking of aliens, Kitsch will be keeping with the action genre as the title character in John Carter of Mars.

"I was looking at a 100-foot green screen and there was an X on it at the 75-foot mark, and that was supposed to be a ship that I'm blowing up," he says. "In situations like that, escapism is a lot harder as an actor, and tests you in different ways.

"With Bang Bang, I had a f—ing child and a vulture. If you can't put yourself in a present moment there, then you've got to go back to New York and study a bit more."

Tired of ridiculous romantic fantasies and heartless special effects? Then mark this Thursday in your calendar because Hot Docs is back. For 18 years the film festival has brought the best documentaries from around the world to Toronto. With more than 200 films to choose from in 2011, Metro created this handy list of recommendations that might remind you of some movies you've loved in the past.

Hot Docs runs from Thursday through to May 8, with movies screening at 12 different venues throughout the city. For more information go to hotdocs.ca.

If you liked Super Size Me, you will like POM Wonderful Presents: The Greatest Movie Ever Sold

Morgan Spurlock is off his McDonalds diet and the subject of his latest is the subliminal marketing in films that audiences are often blissfully unaware they view. Spurlock not only confronts and criticizes marketing execs, but actually financed his film with their tactics (hence the POM Wonderful purchased title).

If you liked Joan Rivers: A Piece Of Work, you'll like Conan O'Brien Can't Stop

Fans of the wonderfully candid Joan Rivers documentary released last year should appreciate this portrait of Conan O'Brien, captured during the live tour he put on after being banned from TV and radio for six months following his ugly public exit from NBC's The Tonight Show. If nothing else, this is the only film in the fest that might feature the Masturbating Bear.

If you liked Man On Wire, you'll like Project Nim

Oscar-winning director James Marsh returns with another genre-bending doc that combines interview and archival footage with vividly constructed reenactments. This time he tells the story of a chimpanzee named Nim whose extraordinary life included being the first chimp to learn sign language and a torturous stay at a medical lab. You'll never identify this closely with a monkey again.

If you liked Jackass, you'll like Beauty Day

Years before Tom Green humped a moose and Johnny Knoxville assembled his Jackasses, Canadian Ralph "Cap'n Video" Zavadil created low-fi TV gold out of insane stunts and professional stupidity. Beauty Day chronicles his period of public access infamy, which almost cost him his life after a neck-breaking stunt. Zavadil is still around and will accompany the film to the fest, but please don't try anything you see in the movie at home.

If you liked Kick-Ass you'll like Superheroes

The "real people trying to be superheroes" trend in film founded in titles like Kick-Ass and Super gets a documentary spin with Superheroes. The doc chronicles life of the members of the RLSH (Real Life Superheroes), a few reality-challenged folks who don leather masks and costumes to clean up the mean streets of Brooklyn, N.Y. Delusions of grandeur are rarely this entertaining.

Lindsay facing serious jail time

Lohan given 120-day sentence Could still be cleared

Though her felony charge was reduced to a misdemeanor, Lindsay Lohan was sentenced to 120 days in jail plus 480 hours of community service for violating her probation by allegedly stealing a $2,500 necklace from a jewelry store, according to TMZ.

But Lohan isn't sunk yet, as the judge is giving the actress the chance to prove her innocence at a trial set to begin May 11.

Lohan posted $75,000 bail and was released five hours later. Her lawyer is appealing the decision.

Yikes! Her first dance!

This week, the Disney movie Prom premieres, reminding us how fun and scary a school dance can be Dr. Susan Newman, Ph.D., social psychologist and author of The Book of NO: 250 Ways to Say It — and Mean It and Stop People-Pleasing Forever, addresses parents' worries

SAM D'AMATO
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS

DISNEY

▶ What to wear will not be the only decision your child will have to make.

WORRY ONE: Dances are basically foreplay for teen sex. I've discussed responsibility with my kid, but I am worried the advice will be forgotten after a night of dancing and too many episodes of Gossip Girl.

SAYS THE DOCTOR: The values and advice you have shared with your teenager hopefully have "sunk in" by the time prom rolls around. It is up to your child to be smart when it comes to sex. Worry about things you can orchestrate. How your child will be influenced or act is pretty much out of your control. Send your child off to have fun, but with a quiet reminder to be careful.

WORRY TWO: Someone else's kids are going to get drunk and drive. How do I warn my kid without sounding like a public service announcement?

SAYS THE DOCTOR: You absolutely want to sound like a public service announcement! In the weeks leading up to the dance, remind your child of teen drunk driving tragedies. You can soften your parental stand by reminding your child that he or she is the most important thing in your life and it's your job to keep him or her safe. Sounds soppy, but it's true.

WORRY THREE: My child is an introvert and will probably spend the entire evening against the wall. Breaks my heart. What should I do?

SAYS THE DOCTOR: You might suggest that your child arrange to attend the dance with a group of friends or one friend. There's comfort in numbers.

Beyond that, there's not a lot a parent can do ... and trying to hard makes the situation worse. If you try to discuss it, your child will tell you don't understand — and you probably don't.

It hurts parents to see a child suffer, but as parents we have to accept the fact that we can't protect our children from every insult and affront.

WORRY FOUR: There's an after-prom party at some other kid's house. The parents are out of town. There will be no chaperones. The ultimate cliché. When do I storm in and act like a police officer?

SAYS THE DOCTOR: You don't. Why can't parents say NO to their children anymore?

The teen brain is not fully mature, particularly the part that thinks ahead, weighs consequences, and manages emotional impulses. Parties without chaperones tend to get out of hand easily and quickly; uninvited guests appear, alcohol and drugs get consumed, noise levels rise and judgment fails. Neighbours call the police and your child winds up in the middle of a situation he or she never intended.

Boundaries, parents, that's your job. Say no or offer to hold the party at your home.

Something old...

Will Kate Middleton wear a family heirloom?

It's guaranteed that Kate Middleton will wear a tiara on her wedding day. What we don't know is if it will be old, new or borrowed from the royal vault.

Gifting a royal bride with a tiara as a wedding present is a long-standing royal tradition. For her wedding, the Queen presented Diana with The Cambridge Lovers Knot tiara, which was made in 1911 for Queen Mary. Sarah Ferguson was given a tiara the royals purchased from Garrard. Sophie, Countess of Wessex, was given a custom-made tiara. It featured jewels from a necklace belonging to Queen Victoria. ALISON MCGILL/ WEDDINGBELLS

A new spin on classic chicken and waffles

What do pankcake mix, barbecue sauce, nacho chips and chicken have in common? They create this dish

EMILY RICHARDS

DINNER EXPRESS

I never back down from a challenge, so when Canadian Family magazine asked me to participate in the launch of its Food Awards, I was game.

The awards honour the top brands used in Canadian households, and will be announced in a special Winter Food Issue.

In the meantime, readers can vote and participate in the Canadian Family Creative Cook Challenge (canadianfamily.ca/creative-cook-challenge), during which they must use ingredients provided by Canadian Family to create a dessert.

My challenge involved pancake mix, plain yogurt, barbecue sauce and more. I came up with Crunchy Chicken Salad Waffle Wraps. I used the pancake mix and yogurt help to create a light fluffy waffle that stays soft and can be used to wrap the chicken, or simply serve it on top.

Preparation:

1. Place pancake mix in bowl; set aside. In another bowl, whisk eggs, yogurt, milk and butter. Whisk into pancake mix until smooth.

2. Heat waffle iron. For each waffle brush lightly with oil; pour in scant ½ cup (125 mL) of the batter. Close lid and cook for about 4 minutes or until steam stops and waffle is golden. Remove gently and repeat with remaining batter; set waffles aside.

3. Crunchy Chicken: In shallow baking dish, whisk barbecue sauce, mustard and thyme. Add chicken and turn to coat evenly; set aside for 10 minutes or cover and refrigerate 8 hours.

4. Meanwhile, combine nachos and mum mums in resealable bag and crush into fine crumbs. Add parsley. Place a few chicken strips in bag and shake to coat. Place coated chicken on parchment paper lined baking sheet and repeat with remaining chicken. Bake in 425 F (220 C) oven for 15 minutes or until no longer pink inside. Top waffles with lettuce and chicken.

Canadian companies emerging as leaders in the clean-tech industry

BEN KNIGHT
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

With each Earth Day that passes, our world becomes more ecologically aware. New, emerging technologies are greener, and vast profits are out there for innovators with the right product, in the right place, at the right time.

Canadian companies are beginning to do very well in the clean-tech field — but not without some considerable risk.

"You have to approach the market in a very strategic manner," says Gael Mourant, president and CEO of ARXX, a leading supplier of Insulating Concrete Forms (ICFs) for energy-efficient construction. "The construction industry is very averse to change.

ISTOCK PHOTOS

You have to make people comfortable with the idea they can do things differently, but at the same time, actually get a better product at a more cost-effective price."

ARXX is based in Cobourg, Ont. Mourant says proximity to the United States is a significant advantage for Canadian clean-tech firms.

"Americans are very receptive to working with Canadian companies, because they see Canadians as being honest and forthright, and as innovators," she notes. "Primarily, Canadians are very adaptable. I think we're very open to new ideas. The idea of green buildings and energy savings is very rooted in Canada."

Scott MacDonald is a partner at Emerald Technology Ventures, an investment firm specializing in clean-tech start-ups. He sees deteriorating global infrastructure as a huge opportunity for Canadian firms.

"There are 70 to 100-year-old assets — around the world — where they don't have technology and innovation right now," he says. "We're trying to make the grid smarter. We're trying to identify where leaks in water systems are."

CHOICES FOR GREEN MOMS

Are cloth diapers the most eco-friendly choice, or are there disposable options that make the cut? Andrea of London, Ont.

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

Disposable diapers are landfill magnets — in some cities diapers and other disposables (razors, plastic wrap, paper coffee cups) are estimated to make up about eight per cent of total household waste. Disposable diapers are also made from plastic, with chlorine-bleached stuffing and added fragrance chemicals. The good news is that cloth diapers aren't what they were 30 years ago.

Today they're stylish, eco-friendly (some are even manufactured with wind power), 100 per cent organic cotton, and you can find brands made in Canada — definitely a worthy choice. There's no need to buy new cloth diapers either. Source them from thrift or secondhand stores — they're washable, after all. Surf online for "green" mommy websites too. They host a plethora of tips, advice and product reviews.

Unconventional and a risk taker. That describes Ottawa interior designer Jason Bellaire, who says that you have to get past your fear and believe in yourself if you're going to be successful in business.

After struggling with his career in his 20s, Bellaire decided to go back to school at the age of 30 to study interior design and architecture.

Jason raised a few eyebrows in the industry when he started his own company six months after graduation.

"It was hammered into our heads at school that you had to apprentice for five or six years before going out on your own. I had to overcome my fear and now looking back over the last two years I can't believe how far I've come."

He has this advice for people who are thinking about starting their own business.

"Plunge into the darkness, ignore the monsters and don't be afraid to ask for advice."

Jason's tips

Tools to a successful business design

- Believe in yourself and your talents.
- Don't make the same mistakes twice.
- Hang out with other successful people and learn.
- Find a mentor and ask lots of questions.
- Don't think that you know it all. Be humble.

Life after the lay-off

Don't fall into failure-mode ◐ The future is bright!

A job loss effects more than just one person.

Lisa Caldas Kappesser, author of The Smart New Way to Get Hired, shares her advice on how to get everyone through it.

Communication
Discuss with your family what your job search strategy is and what steps you have taken or plan to take in the near future.

Communication is critical in families, particularly in times of stress and crisis when many people tend to withdraw.

Empathy
Everyone needs support and understanding. If you have children, listen to their concerns and keep in mind that most children are egocentric.

Optimism
Be a role model for your family in how to deal with crisis and change. Your children will be in a job search someday and will remember how you handled it.

ISTOCK

▶ A job loss can effect your whole family.

They learn from your behavior, so it's best to model positive behavior.

Self-confidence
If you have confidence in yourself, your family and significant other will have more confidence that you can and will find another job.You need to think and act in terms of when you find your next job and not if you will find another job.

Conflict management
Accept that there will be disagreements and work to resolve them. It takes less energy to deal with a conflict when it first arises than it does after months of letting it build up.

Dealing with disagreements openly can help everyone move in a positive direction. Know that you might not agree at the end of your discussion.

A small-city student with big-city ideas

STUDENT VOICE

KATE MACKENZIE
TALENTEGG.CA

SUBMITTED

▶ Kate MacKenize

For me, a student from a small Nova Scotia university, the hardest part of finding a summer job is getting top employers based in large cities to take a second look at my application.

During a recent family vacation, I met a group of five students from the University of Guelph.

When they asked where I attended school, I replied, "Acadia University." To my surprise, not a single one of them had heard of the school.

After that encounter, I couldn't help but wonder if employers were thinking the exact same thing: Uh, Acadia? Who?

If this is true, at least in some organizations, how is this affecting my application during the selection process?

From an employer's perspective, it is certainly justifiable to hire the candidate from the school known for its strong academic standing or the school that you can identify with ("Our organization is based in Toronto so it makes sense to hire from the University of Toronto"). After all, the aim is to hire the brightest and most qualified.

However, from the Nova Scotia student perspective, this makes standing out in a sea of applications that much more difficult.

When I'm applying for a job in Toronto from my residence room at Acadia in Wolfville, N.S., population 3,800 (7,000 during the school year), I can't help but feel like there's a giant wall between myself and the employer.

And, if they're thinking the same thing — who is Kate MacKenzie, what is Acadia, and where the heck is Wolfville — then it seems likely that my application may come second to, "Ah yes, Jane Doe from Queen's. I went to Queen's too!"

I know that this isn't always the case and that many organizations make a sincere effort to fairly evaluate all candidates. However, I think that some companies could improve their recruitment processes by recognizing the gap between small-town students and big-city jobs and adjusting their application accordingly.

Small changes, such as assigning recruiters to regions across Canada and using technology such as Skype to do interviews, can make a huge difference. These adjustments make the recruitment process less location-specific and less intimidating. They also allow the employer to really get to know the candidates face-to-face to ensure that they're hiring the best of the best.

Also, by including students from many different schools and locations, organizations will only benefit from the increased diversity and perspective.

Where Kate is now

Ironically enough, I proposed this exact idea to an organization based in Toronto and explained the unique perspective that I could bring to the company as a result of my East Coast experiences. Now, I couldn't be more excited to be working for that company this summer!

Key take-aways from Kate's school-to-work transition

- If you attend school in a different city than where the organization you want to work for is located, briefly explain the discrepancy in the email or cover letter and outline your plans for relocation.

- Don't be afraid to ask for an interview over the phone or through a video chat program like Skype — in-person interviews aren't the only option.

- Worried your school isn't as recognized as some of the more high profile institutions? Focus primarily on your accomplishments in your resumé and cover letter, but be prepared to discuss the quality of your education in the interview.

Romero stung by early Rays runs

Jays offence fails to click after falling behind in first Tampa's Shields gets first shutout of season

It came down to one pitch in the first inning.

Toronto Blue Jays left-hander Ricky Romero wanted the 0-2 pitch to Ben Zobrist to be up and in. He missed his location — too much middle. Zobrist didn't miss, hitting it over the left-field wall.

The two-run homer gave the Tampa Bay Rays the only runs that right-hander James Shields needed. He pitched a four-hit shutout and struck out seven as the Rays beat the Blue Jays 2-0 to take the rubber match of a three-games series yesterday.

The Blue Jays finished the home stand at 2-3 and have lost seven of their past 11 games.

"It was supposed to be for a ball and I missed the location," said Romero (1-3), who struck out 10 in seven innings. "Zobrist hit it. It's frustrating losing ball games that we're in. I did everything possible to keep us in the game."

"Other than one pitch, he was lights out," catcher J.P. Arencibia said of Romero. "We were trying to go up and in and it stayed over the plate."

Romero still earned praise from Rays manager Joe Maddon, who said the team was lucky to get two off the Jays starter.

"A classic example of having to get a good pitcher early," said Maddon. "Once he found himself and he settled in, he started making much better pitches with everything."

But Shields (2-1) was just that much better.

He allowed two walks, both to Jose Bautista including one to lead off the bottom of the ninth. But he picked off Bautista for the second out of the inning.

Bautista lined out in fourth inning to end a string of reaching base in 11 consecutive plate appearances.

"I finally stopped (Bautista)," Shields said. "He's locked in right now and he was all series."

After walking Bautista in the first, Shields didn't allow another base runner until a Juan Rivera single in the fifth. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Heat can't sweep 76ers

The Philadelphia 76ers told each other in the huddle in the final possessions they were going back to Miami.

Lou Williams proved them right, hitting a three-pointer with 8.1 seconds left to lead the 76ers to an 86-82 win over the Heat yesterday and avoid a sweep.

Miami was 95 seconds away from winning Game 4, holding an 82-76 lead, but LeBron James, Dwyane Wade, Chris Bosh and the rest of the Heat didn't score again.

15 Game 4 followed the familiar pattern of Games 1 and 3, as the 76ers opened an early 15-point lead.

Williams and Evan Turner led the Sixers with 17 points each. Andre Iguodala added 16 points, and Elton Brand had 15 points and 11 rebounds.

James scored 31 points for the Heat and Wade 22. Bosh scored 12 points and had two clutch blocks late in the game.

Preparation giving way to anticipation for Hominick

JIM REYNO
@METRONEWS.CA

It's done: Most of the hardcore training, public appearances, media interviews and strategizing that comes with a title shot at the biggest UFC event in history.

Now, Mark (The Machine) Hominick counts the days till Saturday.

"All the work's done," he said. "It's almost like a waiting game now."

Hominick, from Thameford, Ont., had his last sparring session Saturday, and will take it relatively easy this week as he awaits his featherweight title shot against Jose Aldo.

"Now it's mainly just maintenance, getting the weight on point, you know, just keeping your timing," said Hominick, who has won five straight bouts. "You don't completely stop working out, but the workouts are short, intense — but no contact."

Although he has tried to follow his usual pre-fight program, Hominick says preparing for UFC 129 at Rogers Centre has been anything but routine.

"The amount of support I've gotten — locally, provincially — has been really overwhelming. It's been very motivating throughout the camp."
MARK HOMINICK

"This year was a little different, being co-main event in the biggest UFC of all time, there's been a lot of demands," he said. "I think the main thing is just staying relaxed and focused on Saturday night."

Adding to the demands has been Hominick's situation at home: Wife Ashley is expecting their first child shortly after UFC 129.

"She's doing very well," he said. "She's still planning to come to Toronto, but each day might be different."

First of many strikes

Mark Hominick's highest-profile public appearance came Friday when he threw out the first pitch as the Toronto Blue Jays hosted the Tampa Bay Rays.

"Oh, it was pretty cool," he said. "It's such an iconic piece for Ontario, the Rogers Centre."

Hominick sat at field level with UFC welterweight Sean Pierson and was interviewed on live TV.

And he got to meet several players, including Jays rookie J.P. Arencibia.

"He was a real nice guy — a big MMA fan," said Hominick. JIM REYNO

Habs coach calm ahead of Game 6

If coach Jacques Martin was feeling any heat at his Montreal Canadiens being one loss away from playoff elimination, he wasn't showing it.

The head coach held a meeting with his players yesterday, watched video of Montreal's 2-1 double-overtime loss to the Boston Bruins from the night before and then was the picture of calm as he met with the media.

"I work hard at what I do and I do my best and don't worry about those things," Martin said of playoff pressure. "You enjoy these challenges."

Martin's message for the day was to stay calm and confident even though the loss Saturday night put the Bruins up 3-2 in their best-of-seven Eastern Conference quarter-final.

Game 6 is set for tomorrow night in Montreal.

What Martin sees thus far is a series that is too close to call just yet.

The teams have each scored 12 goals through the first five games. Boston has outshot Montreal 177-165.

"That's how close it is," Martin said.

Last year, Montreal won games in which it could have been eliminated five times.

HAWKS	CANUCKS

Surprise starting goaltender Cory Schneider left last night's Game 6 of the Vancouver Canucks' series against the Chicago Blackhawks with an apparent injury, and Roberto Luongo returned to give up the winning goal in overtime.

Ben Smith scored at the 15:30 mark of the extra period to give Chicago a 4-3 win and force Game 7 in a series the Canucks had led 3-0.

Schneider appeared to hurt himself during Michael Frolik's successful penalty shot at 2:31 of the third period.

He went down in an attempt to block Frolik's shot and stayed on the ice after the goal writhing in pain.

Frolik's goal tied the game at 3-3.

Luongo, who started the first five games of the series, came on in relief.

Vancouver coach Alain Vigneault said after Chicago's 5-0 victory in Game 5 — when Luongo was pulled for a second straight game — that Luongo would remain the starter.

Luongo, a finalist for the Vezina Trophy as the league's top goalie, gave up 10 goals in 40 shots over Games 2 and 3.

FLYERS	SABRES

Brian Boucher got a second chance, Chris Pronger provided an inspirational boost, and thanks to Ville Leino, the Philadelphia Flyers made this comeback stick against the Buffalo Sabres.

On the brink of elimination, and with the Flyers enduring the latest in a string of goalie shuffles, Boucher stopped 24 shots in yet another relief effort and Leino capped Philadelphia's two-goal comeback by scoring 4:43 into overtime in a 5-4 win yesterday to force Game 7 in the first-round playoff series.

The deciding game is at Philadelphia tomorrow to close what's been a tightly contested and topsy-turvy series, in which five of the six games have been won by one goal.

"I've been through some pretty wild and crazy games through my career," said Danny Briere, the former Sabres co-captain who scored twice against his former team. "And today was one of them, the roller-coaster ride that it was. My heart definitely skipped a few beats today."

He wasn't the only one.

Michael Leighton became the third Flyers goalie to start a game this series, before proceeding to become the third Flyers goalie to be yanked after allowing three goals on the first seven shots he faced.

Enter Boucher, who made up for his dreadful performance in a 4-3 overtime loss on Friday, in which he allowed three goals on 11 shots.

And unlike what happened in Game 5, in which the Flyers rallied from a 3-0 deficit before faltering, Leino sealed this victory during a scramble in front.

Kris Versteeg helped set it up. After getting his first shot blocked, Versteeg gained the rebound and flipped the puck at the Sabres net, bouncing it off several players. The puck fell in the crease where Leino slid it into the open side behind diving goalie Ryan Miller.

PREDATORS	DUCKS

Nick Spaling scored his second goal of the game at 4:53 of the third period and the Nashville Predators closed out their first post-season series victory to advance to the Western Conference semifinals, beating the Anaheim Ducks 4-2 yesterday.

Steve Sullivan scored a goal, David Legwand had an empty-netter and Jordin Tootoo assisted on Spaling's goals. The Predators won the series 4-2 in their sixth post-season in seven seasons.

Jason Blake scored a power-play goal, and Teemu Selanne also had a goal for the Ducks. Anaheim looked tired early after blowing a lead late before losing Game 5 in overtime. Coach Randy Carlyle went heavily with his top two lines, trying to rally.

Anaheim lost in the opening round for the third time in seven playoffs.

The fifth-seeded Predators must wait and see who they play next.

Spaling scored his first two goals in the post-season. Tootoo had four points in the series, matching the total he had in his 24 playoff games before this season.

Anna, Babe, Happy 17th Month, I enjoy all the times we've been together, thank you for everything. I love you with all my heart~
From YIK

Moya Lubov, I wish I could go 15 hours in the future and 10,000 kilometres across the ocean. We'd write another article together, you'd wear your RCMP shirt, and recite me Japanese poetry. xo
From SOLNYSHKO

Nathan Crane, I love you with all my heart and I'm so glad that we are together. I would shower with you in a thousand roses.
From ADRIAN

Roxie, Since you've crept into my life Into every pore you have seeped I no longer know where I end and you begin Forever...we...are...

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You will have to make some kind of sacrifice today, and you should do so willingly.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 Make the most of your opportunities.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Find a way to switch off the chaos and confusion of the outside world.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 You CAN change things for the better, but you've got to work with like-minded souls.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 The more negative others get the more determined you'll be to prove them wrong.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 Don't sit back and wait for others to take the lead — take it yourself and set the agenda.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Listen to your instincts and act on what they tell you.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Make a special effort to get along with the people you live, work and do business with.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 If you neglect something small today something big could fall apart.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Push doubts aside and take the kind of risks you usually try to avoid.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Certain people are going to make life difficult for you today.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20. Start conversations with total strangers. SALLY BROMPTON
